WITH THE FARMERS

By Prof. W. F. MASSEY

Spraying Vegetables.

"What strength of formaldehyde will be safe to use in vegetables like lettuce in frames, and how strong a formula of Boruseaux mixture to use on tomatoes, etc., outdoors?" The 2-per cent solution of formaleshyde will be safe I think, i have used the 2-per cent solution of formaleshyde will be safe I think, i have used the 5-5-59 formula for but for some of the more tender vegetables it would be safer to make it i-6-50. That is, four pounds copper sulphate, six pounds of lime, and fifty gallons of water.

Spraying Vegetables like than manure simply spread in the furrows five feet apart.

This year Mr. Alten says that the men who are paying $3.25 a ton for the New York manure will be badly left if the melon crop proves unprofitable, and the clover will be addly left if the melon crop proves unprofit able, as it sometimes does, and he is sure that the clover will be of greater benefit to the land, and make as good crops of melons as the manure, which is always reinforced with fertilizer. One of the greatest drawbacks to the Southern trucker is the effect on his land of a constant dependence only on commercial fertilizers without keeping up the humus in his soil. I have often urged our sweet potato growers that it would be far more profitable to have a growth of crimson clover all over the land for this crop than to be every winter laborlously raking up and hauling and spreading pine straw to turn under for the potatoes. Some who have done this have found that I was right, and that the clover is far Saturday, February 7, 1914. amount of this humus-making material than manure simply spread in the fur-

"In sowing spring oats, with grass, on land that will make about twenty-five bushels of corn an acre, which would you use, and how much, ground phosphate rock at 60 cents per 100 pounds or acid phosphate at 50 cents per 100 pounds or acid phosphate at 50 cents per 100 pounds?" The prices of both are excessively high, but on land such as you name, the phosphate rock would probably give no returns at all on the oats crop. Mixed with stable manure or applied to soil rich in decayed vegatable matter, the pulverized rock will do very well, but on land that will only make twenty-five bushels of corn an acre it will be a good while becoming available to plants. It will pay far better to use the acid phosphate, at rate of 300 pounds an acre.

Mule-Footed Hogs.

"I have been told that the mule-footed hog do got a first pounds of the cheaper for the potatoes. The more organic decay in Court, in B. B. 21-16. Gross of relations of the lawy and the manus in the payment of a stable with the court of the co trucker and melon grower, here, a few days ago, we got to discussing whether it pays the melon grower to buy the New York manure now that the price has advanced to $3.25 per ton on the siding. Mr. Allen in years gone by has usually bought 3,000 tons of this manure annually. Last year he said that he was going to try the difference be-tween crimson clover and manure for growing melons. He had a defise stand of clover all over the land, for to insure this he sowed half a bushel of seed an acre. He turned this un-der and used commercial fertilizers as he usually did with the manure in the furrows, and he told me that he had a better crop than usual. A heavy growth of clover all over the land will probably give the grower a larger amount of nitrogen than manure in the furrows only, and certainly, since the value of the manure is largely in the amount of organic matter it
